

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NEW SURGICAL BOOK FOR MEDICAL MISSIONARIES:

As of March 2010, the National Institute of First Assisting, Inc., NIFA® has received exclusive rights to distribute the 485 page ebook “Surgery and Healing in the Developing World” to the perioperative community and it’s yours absolutely free.

Are you interested in going on a surgical mission? Did you know that even the simplest of tasks performed in your surgical suite could be riddled with obstacles and complications when performed in a Third World setting?

Now, you can have all your questions regarding surgical medical missions answered in this educational and eye-opening offering by 2009’s American College of Surgeon’s “Volunteer of the Year” and 2000’s “Humanitarian of the Year” Dr. Glenn Geelhoed. Glenn has also part of the NIFA teaching faculty since 2008.

This book assists in narrowing the divide between the labor and equipment intensive practice of medicine and surgery in Europe and North America (First World) and the Third World of constrained resources where ingenuity is not only rewarded, but is a requirement in medical/surgical care. It reviews tricks of ancillary trades which add to the resourcefulness that can be brought to the field in laboratory, anesthesia, nursing services, and even such taken-for-granted supply of one’s own utility services such as water, electricity and basic materials like IV fluids and suture.

In addition, the author believes that the improvisations and techniques reviewed in this text can be carried back as skills learned—a gift from the Third to the First World—and adapted to the care of increasingly diverse populations of patients closer to home. The intention is that lives should be enhanced on either side of the exchange. These goals are outlined in the intent and contents of this book and it is free to all those visiting our NIFA RNFA website.
